By ticking this box you confirm that this is your original, unpublished work

By ticking this box you confirm that you are happy to participate in an interview with Good Housekeeping and relevant information published in future features.

You are also happy to have this information published in any publicity connected to the Novel Competition that Good Housekeeping chooses to run

Terms & Conditions • The book must be fiction in any genre, apart from children's literature. • The competition is open to writers who have never had a novel published before and who are not already signed to a literary agent • Only one entry is permitted per person. • Please enclose a printed version of your entry, printed double-spaced in 12pt type on A4 paper, along with the entry form above. We're sorry, we can't accept entries submitted by email and we're unable to return manuscripts. • All entries must be received by 31 March 2012. The judging panel's decision is final. • The prize is: £25,000 advance; publication of your novel upon its completion; and an introduction to top literary agent Luigi Bonomi. There is no cash alternative to the prize. • The winner will be notified on or before 31 May 2012. • Details of the winner will be published in Good Housekeeping in our August 2012 issue. An interview and book extract will appear upon publication. Winners must agree to be interviewed for a feature in Good Housekeeping magazine. • Hearst Magazines UK reserves the right not to award the prize if we do not receive any entries of a publishable standard. • For full magazine T&Cs, see the GH Team page
